Keeping Brimbank in business

COVID-19 has again highlighted the importance of supporting small businesses.

Following the announcement and subsequent extension of a snap lockdown in Victoria, people are turning to local businesses and family-owned establishments to help support their region.

Brimbank mayor Ranka Rasic encourages local residents to shop small and support their community during our fifth lockdown.

"Local businesses – both big and small – are a really important part of our local community. When we support them, we're also supporting local jobs, the local supply of products and services, and the local economy as a whole. Supporting local businesses will help us all recover from the impacts of the COVID pandemic together," Cr Rasic says.

While times have changed since the pandemic began, it is reassuring to see many local businesses adapting to lockdown-friendly shopping.

"During this time, many Brimbank businesses have changed how they operate by providing their services in a different way, like moving to takeaway food options or providing for online ordering."

"We encourage our community to support our local Brimbank businesses where they can," says Cr Rasic.

"When thinking about what you need, we ask our community to 'Think. Shop. Buy Local.' We can support each other and our businesses in a really practical way."
