Morgan's IGA is serving locals in more ways than one

Celebrating its 50th year of business, Morgan's IGA is once again looking to increase its community involvement. Founded in Melton unde the Tuckerbag banner in 1971, Morgan's IGA now has five stores around Victoria and is immensely proud of its team and commitment to community.

This family-owned and operated business has stores in Melton, Sunbury, Gisborne, Delahey and West Sunshine, and is pleased to be involved in local communities year after year. Providing donations, sponsorships and more to local initiatives, Morgan's is committed to always providing excellent customer service and great deals on products.

As a growing business with strong community values, Morgan's IGA is looking to employ more locals. From school students to experienced adults, the business has a variety of positions available across its five locations.

Morgan's IGA store operations manager, Jay Morgan, is proud of his family business and the way that it has continuously given and received support from the community. Like many staff members, a variety of suppliers to Morgan's IGA are also locals. By supporting Morgan's IGA, customers are ensuring that they are giving back to their local community and supporting loved ones through initiatives and fundraisers.

Jay says that the business has a focus on "putting health on the shelves." There's a massive selection – not the average – of health and wellbeing products to cater for vegan, vegetarian and keto requirements as well as gluten and dairy-free diets.

Another aspect making the store a destination for family shopping is that the meat section is run by - as Jay puts it, "real" butchers, who understand their customers' meat requirements and cater for that.

Customers who want the convenience of online shopping (but miss out on sushi) will find that the Morgan's IGA online store offers more products than online Coles and Woolworths – and there's also the option of home delivery. This sounds good when life's busy.

Morgan's IGA has a strong focus on teamwork and positive workplace culture.
