Tour delightful Point Cook Village

By Elle Cecil

Point Cook Village is a resort-style retirement community offering the convenience of a small town inside its gated walls. With a shopping centre situated a short walk or less than five minute drive from the village, you'll have all you need in an intimate yet spacious environment.

The past two years have proved difficult for many people with social isolation and loneliness affecting Australians as we fought through the pandemic.

There are a myriad of positives to living in an RCA Village. Extensive security measures including gates, vigilant neighbors, security cameras and keycards will put your mind at ease. You can also get rid of your lawnmower at Point Cook Village, and focus your time on your garden if that tickles your fancy! If not, you can establish a low maintenance, simple garden that both looks great and proves easy to take care of.

The pandemic has taught us the importance of social interaction and emotional support for everyone, and Point Cook Village has a strong team of professional support staff and amicable residents.

As we continue to be released of more and more restrictions, older people and retirees may be once again left as the only ones at home in the street during business hours.

Living in a retirement community such as Point Cook Village means residents will always have a peer to chat to, walk with, have a cuppa with or play a game of cards.

The heart of the village is the clubhouse, where smiling faces will welcome you at reception, serve you tea and coffee from the cafe or drinks from the bar and stop for a chat in the shared spaces.

Point Cook Village possesses onsite medical consulting rooms that are regularly visited by a doctor and allied health practitioners, as well as pampering services including a hairdresser and nail artist.

Facilities also include a pool and spa, gym room, billiards and games room, library with computers and wifi, as well as a multi purpose room. There is also the opportunity to meet new people with similar interests and values.

Activities such as lawn bowls, golf, bridge and craft groups meet regularly at the village and can make life far more rewarding and inclusive, while a workshop provides a purposeful hobby to tinker with, and the veggie garden nurtures the soul.

The village will be welcoming prospective residents into its grounds on Wednesday May 25, where you can tour the grounds, view the facilities and chat with village manager Michael Lynch. You can also chat with residents on the day as well as enjoying drinks, a barbecue and some sweets.

"The bowling club has organised some games of bowling, volunteers will be staffing the barbecues and coffee club with cakes and scones, residents will be doing meet and greets in the clubhouse, apartments and villas will be open for inspection and visitors will have a chance to speak directly with residents and village staff," Michael says.

The brilliant gardens and fantastic homes are based around the central canal - sweeping views of the bowling green and canal from the Clubhouse showcase the beautiful water features and add a tranquil feel to the village.

With luscious landscaping lining the walking tracks through the village, residents can enjoy a morning stroll, a walk with their dog or even chasing after the grandkids.

If you're looking to downsize your home but increase convenience and security, as well as keep living life to the fullest, consider Point Cook Village today.

The open day runs from 10am to 2pm on Wednesday May 25.
