Grocery and Liquor Co Bell Post Hill opens its doors on Friday, April 1. As a family owned and operated business for over 45 years, the Bell Post Hill store is set to join the Newtown and Gisborne stores in providing excellent service to the local community.

Stocking a great variety of products including fresh meat and produce, bakery and deli goods, dairy and frozen goods, liquor and tobacco, newspapers and other items.

The opening of the new store is a great step in expanding this local family-owned business for owner David Williamson.

"My first job as a kid was to stand at the back of the register and pack customers' groceries and take them to their car," David says.

David's son Joel is now the manager of the Newtown store, and the team is proud to be maintaining its family and community values.

"I am a very passionate retailer that loves customer service and providing customers with high standards in shop presentation and fresh foods," he said. "Our company vision is to continually eploy good people in our stores and to allow our managers the opportunity to invest into future stores - we are a business, not a chain."

Both the Bell Post Hill and Newtown stores will be advertising their grand opening specials for the entire month of April.

"Most small retail supermarkets can't offer the range, pricing and customer service that my stores offer," says David.

"We have the experience and supply chain to deliver fantastic business for small neighborhood communities."
